

The Department of International Relations, Faculty of Social Sciences, in collaboration with Carnegie India, organized a 1-day workshop on “India and the Sovereignty Principle” on 4th November, 2019 at the South Asian University. The workshop sought to understand the salience of the sovereignty principle for India at a time when India’s capabilities have been on an upward trajectory. Did enhancement in India’s power lead to changes in the way India has approached the sovereignty principle in the past? To answer this question, three topics – diplomacy, hard power, and technology – were used as lenses to understand elements of continuity and change in the sovereignty principle. The workshop was convened by Dr. Nabarun Roy of the Department of International Relations.
